Folks, all any self-respectin' Polly can do is repeat what she hears . . . so I'm tellin' you everybody is talkin' about those low, low, low, low, low, low (Folks, I can't turn it off) low, low, low prices at the "Rangs Ranch." Let's Talk It Over
By SARA SAZE

Dear Mrs. Saze,
Did you ever hear of a man getting sick because he didn't like his job? My husband works where he has to take turns on this night shift and he never has liked night work. He has started having some kind of stomach trouble and his color gets bad, and the doctor asks him the same question every time he goes to see him, if he is on the night shift now.

Well, it so happens that he has been on the night shift every time his stomach gets real bad. He still says he just knows it couldn't make him sick, and for a long time I didn't believe it either.

But for about three months I've been watching and I'll have to say it does work the same way every time. About two days before he goes on at night he starts looking peaked, and pretty soon he's either spending his money for drug store pills or back to the doctor again.

I don't want to go on worrying about it if it's nothing, and I think he'd like to know what you think, too.

A Reader.

Dear Reader,
Remember that, in any case where illness is involved, my opinion is that of a layman and, therefore, of little value.

However, I do subscribe to the belief that unhappiness — whether from unpleasant working conditions or what not — can and often does react in harmful physical ways. Physical well-being and happiness very often keep close company and it's wise for the Gloomy Gus in our midst to turn this over in his mind.

Dear Mrs. Saze,
We would like to start a library for our children, giving each a book occasionally along with birthday and Christmas gifts.

Please mention some good books that will be of interest to them.

We have four, between the ages of eight months and twelve years.

Thanks,
Book Worms.

Dear B. W's.,
By writing to the Public Relations Office, The New York Public Library, Fifth Ave., and 42nd St., New York 18, N. Y., you can obtain a list of good books that will appeal to youthful readers and the selection of subjects is far-ranging.

I think you'll be pleased with this service. Ask for Books for Young Readers, and later you'll probably want their Books for the Teen Ager.

Nature blows hot as well as cold in Alaska. The most violent volcanic eruption ever recorded occurred on the Alaska Peninsula in 1912. Mount Katmai hurled about six cubic miles of rocky matter into the air, covering most of northwestern America with gases and volcanic ash.

THE CHURCH FOR ALL... ALL FOR THE CHURCH
The Church is the greatest factor on earth for the building of character and good citizenship. It is a storehouse of spiritual values. Without a strong Church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should attend services regularly and support the Church. They are: (1) For his own sake. (2) For his children's sake. (3) For the sake of his community and nation. (4) For the sake of the Church itself, which needs his moral and material support. Plan to go to church regularly and read your Bible daily.

When does a baby start to think? Nobody knows, exactly. But thoughts do come by association. Baby eagerly responds to the sight of a bottle because experience has proven that the bottle offers both satisfaction and comfort.

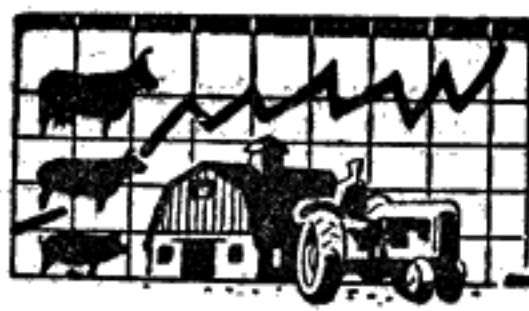

Because baby does learn by association, it is important that parents take care to enlarge their children's horizons as they grow. A very small child will respond to a simple prayer. And a child of three will find great enjoyment in attending Church School geared for youngsters of that age.

Religious instruction and guidance is not for the mature only—it is needed regularly by everyone. The spiritual life of your child needs constant cultivation, just as the mind needs day by day development and the physical body needs exercise and training.

Prevent Heavy Insect Damage

Certain insects are continuing to damage corn and other crops throughout Alabama.

there are heavy infestations of southern corn rootworms in several sections of the state. Re-planting has been required in a number of areas since the insects damage the plants by feeding on the larger roots and in the base of the stalk. After they have entered the stalk, there are no effective control methods. However, a preventative to use with late planted corn is the application of one pound of technical aldrin, dieldrin, or heptachlor or two pounds of chlordane mixed with the fertilizer and applied at planting.

According to the specialist, armyworms are continuing to damage small grain throughout central and south Alabama. He expects that the second generations of these pests will be infesting young corn within the next week or so. The recommended control measures are 10 percent DDT, 20 percent toxaphene, two percent endrin, or 10 percent methoxychlor dust used at the rate of 20 pounds per acre. It is important that these materials be applied when the worms are in the early stages of development.

Heavy infestations of the Mexican bean beetles are occurring in central and south Alabama. The insect attacks the foliage of bunch and pole beans in the adult and larvae stages. Grimes warns that almost complete defoliation may occur if they are not controlled. He recommends dusting at weekly intervals with 10 percent methoxychlor five percent malathion, 20 percent toxaphene, or five percent sevin at the rate of 20 pounds per acre.

Corner on Cotton

BY BOB COLLINS

What does "competitive price" mean when we talk about cotton? ... it doesn't necessarily mean a low price ... but it does mean that cotton must be priced at a level where some other fiber can't be profitably used to displace it ... and competitive price doesn't mean lower profits for the farmer, either ... in fact, nearly everybody we talk to in the industry wants to see the farmer make more money so he'll stay interested in growing cotton ... think what a blow it would be to ginners, merchants, oil millers, warehousemen, spinners and weavers if all the cotton farmers switched to another crop ... all these people are interested in seeing the farmer prosper, but nobody associated with cotton is going to prosper unless there is a growing consumption of raw cotton ... there isn't going to be one unless cotton can do a job as good as any other fiber and as CHEAPLY.

Cotton Vs. Cotton

Now what about U. S. growths competing with foreign cotton??? other items also enter the picture ... there is certainty of supply and good shipments ... both of these favor the U. S., but the subsidy that gets U. S. cotton down pricewise to meet foreign growths is subject to change ... this may not favor American cotton ... since we have announced that our cotton will compete pricewise with foreign grown cotton and since we say that we will increase the subsidy whenever necessary, foreign buyers are wary ... perhaps by holding off their buying of the U. S. cotton they can cause an increase in the subsidy and thus get the fiber cheaper ... or they think, "what if I buy U. S. cotton at one price and then the subsidy is increased?? ... I'll be stuck with a higher priced cotton than if I had waited ..." the trade feels that we should have a subsidy that gets our cotton into the competitive market, but also it should be a firm subsidy, not subject to increase during the season ... while the subsidy CAN be increased, the U. S. Department of Agriculture has just said that it hopes improved textile conditions and world prices will allow a decrease ... also, the subsidy has never been increased during a cotton season ... this may offset marketing disadvantages of a possible increased subsidy ... all of this to show that making cotton competitive isn't a simple thing and while the main thing is price, there are many other factors.

Grow Quality Dairy Calves

The best way to get quality dairy calves is to grow them. Farmers can usually raise their own calves and grow them into cheap calves than they can buy them, reports API Extension Dairyman John Parrish. Make sure the heifers were sired by top-proved bulls. And see to it that the calf gets some of the first milk from its mother, soon after it is born. The specialist recommends feeding the calf its mother's milk for the first three days. When the calf is 24 hours old, place it in a small, individual, dry pen that is free from drafts. It should drink milk from a clean pail, and don't feed it more than from six to eight pounds of milk daily during the first week. Feed from seven to 10 pounds daily until the calf is eating about one pound of calf starter each day. Then it can be weaned from the milk. Parrish advises moving the pens to clean ground every seventh day.

Start feeding the calf good quality hay the second week and always keep a bucket of clean water available. Never feed over four pounds of the starter, and change it to a good 16 percent dairy ration when the calf is four months old. Feeding changes should be made gradually over a period of six or seven days. After the calves are weaned from milk, they can be placed together on pasture if they are about the same age and size.

Scrap Metal Can Damage Livestock

It seems that no one can really explain why farm animals like to eat bits of wire, nails, screws and bolts, and scraps of hardware.

However, it is a costly fact that many valuable animals have been lost due to irritations or punctures caused by swallowing such objects. These losses can be prevented to a large extent, says API Extension Engineer J. T. Gaillard.

The first step the specialist recommends is removing fences of woven and stranded wire that are weakened from rust. Other sharp bits of wire will drop into the lush grass under the fence. This is extremely hazardous for grazing livestock.

After a construction or repair job, screws or nails are often found around the barnyard. Gaillard advises sweeping the area thoroughly or dragging it with permanent magnets. It is certainly worth the time and trouble to get rid of the scrap metal.

"The most effective method for removing trash," Gaillard says, "is by placing permanent or electromagnetic magnets in the feed chute from the bin."

Pure Seeds Will Result In Profits

Planting pure grain sorghum seed will result in uniform maturity at harvest and will help guard against off-type plants in the field.

Most hybrid grain sorghum varieties will produce an occasional tall plant, says Extension Agronomist Melvin Moore. These may be due to outcrossing with sudan or sorgho. For this reason, the specialist recommends planting only first year hybrid seed.

Certified seed is best for any grain sorghum, but especially for hybrids, since the seed has to meet certain quality standards for maintaining varietal purity. Grain sorghum varieties can become mixed by cross pollination or by mechanical mixture in the harvesting, cleaning, and storage operation, says Moore.

Alabama farmers who plan to plant sorghum during 1959 are warned against using varieties that have not been tested and proved by the API Agricultural Experiment Station. For North Alabama, the specialist recommends Martin Combine, Redland, and RS 610 varieties; for Central Alabama, Combine Sagrain, Dekalb D-50A, and RS 610; and for South Alabama, Combine Sagrain.

Moore points out that the hybrids RS 610 and Dekalb D-50A have been recommended only on a trial basis. In general, none of the hybrids tested for three years have shown a definite advantage over other recommended varieties. During a three-year period, the average yield of the highest producing hybrid, RS 610, has been about 16 percent greater than that of Martin Combine in North Alabama. However, RS 610 lodged considerably more than Martin Combine.

Results in Profits

results in much unhappiness. He says there is a difference between credit used for farm purposes and that used for consumption. Farm credit helps produce an income that will exceed the amount of money borrowed, while consumer credit is a way of spending money in advance of anticipated income.

One of the main advantages of families planning together is that many items purchased for the home add greatly to farm income. For example, plumbing and electrical equipment are important to the farmer and the homemaker. Helms says that successful farm families can distinguish between necessities, needs, and wants and spend accordingly. He points out that credit of the installment type is not good when farm income is on a seasonal basis. The time of income and the expected amounts should influence repayment arrangements.

A person who specializes in lending for farm businesses determines the assets and liabilities of both the farm and home. A loan that is good for one must also be good for the other.

Credit Should Be Used Carefully

Credit is not a substitute for income. API Extension Economist Foy Helms points out that credit should be used to buy consumer goods only when some income is reasonably certain. Since farm and home needs overlap, it is important for the farm family to plan for their needs at the same time. Both the farmer and homemaker should agree on how and where credit should be used.

According to the Economist, wise use of credit can help many farm people attain a desirable standard of living, but poor use often
